AUTO VICTIM'S FOLKS PROSTRATED

All Who Were with Frederick Benck When He Was Killed Under Doctor's Care—Never Want to See Machine Again.

The body of Frederick Benck, who was killed yesterday in an automobile accident at Rahway, was removed from that city to his home to-day. His mother, brother, sister and brother-in-law, who were with him when he received his fatal injuries, are under the care of physicians, suffering from nervous shock.

Mr. Benck and the others of his family left Westchester yesterday in an automobile, bound for Asbury Park. He acted as chauffeur and his brother-in-law, J. Emil Walch, sat on the front seat beside him. It was the intention of the party to follow their usual route, down through Newark, Elizabeth and Rahway and then to the seashore.

The machine, a powerful touring car, was new, but Mr. Benck was experienced in handling similar cars and had no hesitation in putting it to its full speed capacity when he found a suitable place of road. Such a stretch exists west of Rahway, skirting the grounds of the Colonial Golf Club.

The ponderous machine got away from the control of Mr. Benck on a slight curve. It dashed into a tree by the roadside, and all of the occupants were hurled to the ground.

Fortunately all but Mr. Benck landed in a grass plot and escaped serious injury. He was thrown against the tree and his head crushed.

His brother and brother-in-law carried him some distance up the road in the direction of the golf club, where an automobile happened along. The machine was pressed into service and the injured man was hurried to Rahway to the office of Dr. H. Page Hough. He did not respond to treatment and died in a few hours without regaining consciousness.

Following his death his mother and sister collapsed.

The machine, which the party was riding was not badly damaged, but it will never be taken back to the Benck home. It was towed into Rahway, and orders have been issued to sell it.

ICEBERGS AHoy! COOL TALE FOR HOT WEATHER READING

Refreshing News of Highball Raw Material Brought to Port—Also a Little Yarn About Platons of Military Whales Commanded by Able Seafish—Next!

Just as the temperature was approaching the unbearable point to-day Capt. J. Wulf arrived at Rahway with his goods ship the United States, from Copenhagen, and reported sighting an iceberg 500 feet long, 300 feet wide and 200 feet high. There is some comfort in the knowledge that there is so much ice as that in the world.

This iceberg was sighted on June 18 in latitude 42° N., longitude 48° W. Persons who may feel impelled to seek for it there are warned that it was moving when Capt. Wulf sighted it and is probably several blocks away by this time. The berg was in sight of the vessel for three hours. It coated the air to such an extent that the passengers on deck sat below for heavy overcoats and wraps. If Capt. Wulf had fastened a line to the iceberg, towed it to New York and tied it to the Statue of Liberty how happy we would be.

But the iceberg was not all that Capt. Wulf and his passengers saw. On last Saturday, at George's Bank, he sighted a school of whales so vast that the captain to any how many there were in it. Thousands, no doubt, were swimming doggedly in the direction of the North Pole.

They were in perfect alignment. He saw an army of them. At intervals of about half a mile along the line gigantic records were seen as the captain, Capt. Wulf, is of the opinion that the school captured the whales somewhere and was driving them to some rendezvous. The captain of the St. Paul, which arrived yesterday, also brings news of a school of whales seen on June 21. An educated baboon on board regretted that he didn't know enough to figure out how many high-tails the iceberg might make.

All of which is not bad reading for a hot day.

DARK DIPLOMACY.

BY WALTER A. SINCLAIR.
"Hi!" says Loomis. "Hi!" says he. "I'm off on dark diplomacy—"

Of muffled cloaks and knee-high pants—The kind they use in Spain and France. Where diplomats have got a list Of 'Han!' and don't forget the 'Hi!'

"Hi!" says Loomis. "Hi!" again. These foreign diplomats men May think I come to get the bones Of that great hero, John Paul Jones. The secret of my trip they missed And I'll not tip it off, so hi!"

"Blen!" says Loomis. "Zut!" and "Hein." I've got those pretty words down fine; Although some may prefer a "Hi." Or deep, impenetrable "Bah!" But still I must contend the gist Of dark diplomacy is—"Hi!"

"Ah!" says Loomis, in a way That may mean 'yes' and also 'no.' For diplomats in foreign lands Are schooled to never tip their hands. When dark diplomacy you handle You must be dark as asphalt scandal.

"Hum!" says Loomis; "hum!" says he. With air of deepest mystery; "Don't tip it off that I have said That there is deep, dark work ahead. For other tips might understand What it is. Now, strike up the band."

Thus deeply veiled in mystery Dark Loomis sailed across the sea. While all of Europe's crowned dry bones Shook, mystified, upon their thrones.

SEA WATER-CART CUTS UP STUNTS

Erratic Twentieth Century—Not a Flyer—Rune Amuck and Entertains Harbor with Some Marine Acrobatics.

That mite of a harbor boat, the Twentieth Century, which has a maximum speed of six knots an hour and uses it doing missionary work in the rivers and bay, supplying newly arrived craft with fresh water, got a snag in her steering gear to-day and for about half an hour entertained river front folks by doing strange stunts.

The Twentieth Century was off Governor's Island looking for some one to give fresh water to, when she began to set up. First she would back, then make a wide circle and go ahead again. She cut all sorts of remarkable capers and finally wound up in the ferry slip of the Hamilton ferry.

The erratic marine waterwagon was foundering around there when the harbor boat came across the river, heading straight for the ship. Her pilot caught sight of the Twentieth Century just in time to reverse his engine and save himself from crashing her to splinters.
